Purpose for maintaining the register and legal basis for processing personal data	AVOP - Graduand feedback questionnaire asks graduating students to evaluate and provide feedback on their education. The findings are used locally by institutions to improve their institutional processes and practices and nationally to inform performance-based monitoring and funding. Kandipalaute is the universities' national student feedback survey that is used to assess how satisfied students who have completed their bachelor's degree are with their respective universities as well as their experiences on the progression of their studies. The survey is based on scientific research that focuses on learning, studying and teaching as well as the HowULearn survey, which was developed on the basis of this research at the University of Helsinki. The results of the survey are used in the development of the education provided by the universities and in national university guidance activities. Survey (AVOP or Kandipalaute) is sent to all graduating degree students from universities of applied sciences and all university students who have completed a bachelor's degree. Their responses are collected using the Arvo Education Management Information Service. The VIRTIA Higher Education Achievement Register is used to collect the data that is needed to confirm the student's right to respond, guide students towards the correct survey, identify respondents who have already answered

Transfer of data to third countries	No personal data is disclosed or otherwise routinely transferred outside the EU and EEA. The higher education institution’s data protection policy is to pay special attention to any situation where personal data is to be transferred outside the EU and EEA to any country that does not provide the level of data

	protection mandated by the EU's General Data Protection Regulation. The transfer of personal data outside the EU and EEA will be conducted in accordance with the requirements presented in the General Data Protection Regulation.
Storage period / definition criteria for personal data	All personal data is stored for as long as necessary for the completion of analyses (at least 5 years). The storage of personal data is conducted in accordance with higher education institution specific storage periods.
The right of data subjects to access, correct or remove their data and to request for the restriction of the processing of their data or transfer their data from one system to another (General Data Protection articles 15, 16, 17, 18 and 20)	AVOP All requests related to the rights of data subjects can be submitted to organisation-specific addresses. A list of these can be found here Kandipalaute All requests related to the rights of data subjects can be submitted to university-specific addresses. A list of these can be found here A student's access to their own data A student has the right to know what personal data about them is being processed and what data has been stored about them. The student may submit an information request to the higher education institution. In such cases, the following procedure will take place: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The higher education institution will submit the requested information as soon as possible without undue delay. The requester must provide separate proof of their identity if they are asked to do so. The deadline for the delivery of the data or additional information related to the information request is one month after the request was received. If the information request is complex and wide-ranging, the deadline may be extended by two months. • The information is generally provided free of charge. If the student requests for several copies, a fee based on administrative costs will be collected. If the information request is clearly without basis or unreasonable or the student submits information requests repeatedly, the higher education institution may collect the administrative costs caused by the delivery of the information or entirely refuse to deliver the information. In such cases, the higher education institution must justify the decision it has made. • If the higher education institution does not deliver the information, a written statement on the matter will be provided to the student. In connection with this, the student will be informed of their right to legal remedies, for example their right to submit a complaint to the supervisory authority. A student's right to the correction of their data <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A student has the right to demand that any erroneous, inaccurate or deficient personal data that applies to them be corrected or supplemented without undue delay. In addition, the student has the right to demand the removal of any unnecessary personal data that applies to them. • If the higher education institution does not approve of the correction request, a written statement is provided on the matter specifying the

	reasons due to which the demand was not approved. In connection with this, the higher education institution will inform the student of their right to legal remedies, for example their right to submit a complaint to the supervisory authority. A student's right to the removal of their data <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Based on the legal basis for the processing of the data, a student may have the right to demand the removal of their personal data from the higher education institution's register. This right does not apply to such cases where the processing of personal data is necessary due to a legal obligation or the exercise of the official authority belonging to the higher education institution. The storage and removal of data is conducted in accordance with the higher education institution's data management plan and statutory data storage periods. The right to request for the restriction of processing <ul style="list-style-type: none"> In certain situations, a student may have the right to ask for a restriction of the processing of their personal data until the legal basis for the data or its processing has been appropriately checked and corrected or supplemented. The right to transfer personal data from one system to the next to another controller <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The transfer of personal data from one system to the next means that the data subject receives the personal data that they have provided in a structured, common and machine-readable format and that they can transfer the data in question to another controller without being prevented from doing so by the higher education institution. This right only applies to situations where the processing of the data is automatic and based on consent or an agreement. The right does not apply to for example the processing of such personal data that is necessary for the completion of a task related to the public interest or the fulfilment of a legal obligation belonging to the controller. This means that this right is not primarily applicable to the personal data registers of the higher education institution.
A data subject's right to object to data processing	Based on a personal and special situation, a student has the right to object to the processing of their personal data at any time when the legal basis for the processing is the completion of a task concerning the public interest, the execution of public authority or the higher education institution's privileged right. In such cases, the data may only be processed further if an especially and justified reason can be presented for the processing of the data. The student has the right to object to the processing of their personal data for direct marketing purposes for no special reason and at any time.
A data subject's right to revoke their consent	In situations where the processing of a student's personal data is based solely on consent, the student may revoke their consent. The revocation of the consent does not affect the legality of the processing that occurred on the basis of the consent provided before the revocation.

	AVOP The revocation of a data subject’s consent is submitted to organisation-specific addresses, a list of which can be found here Kandipalaute The revocation of a data subject’s consent is submitted to university-specific addresses, a list of which can be found here
The right of a data subject to submit a complaint to the supervisory authority	A student may submit a complaint to the supervisory authority if they feel that the processing of their personal data violates the EU’s General Data Protection Regulation (EU) 2016/679. In addition, the student also has the right to exercise other administrative appeal methods and legal remedies. For more information, see https://tietosuoja.fi/en The student also has the right to bring an action against the controller or organisation processing the personal data if they feel that their rights have been violated due to the fact that the processing of the personal data has not been done in accordance with the General Data Protection Regulation.
The processing of personal data for automated decision-making, including profiling	No
